

Midshipman Jack (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Midshipman Jack More than twelve months have passed since Jack Benson, then a First Class Boy in the Navy, stood on the quarter-deck of the gunboat Otter in Port Royal Harbor while his commanding officer pinned the Naval Medal of Honor upon his breast. The story of the two years service that led up to this distinction and his appointment as Acting Midshipman in the Naval Academy, is told in Jack Bensons Log and A Medal of Honor Man, the opening volumes of this series. Jack now comes forward again in the uniform of a Yankee midshipman, to tell the story of his brief Academic career and of his term of service with the Gulf squadron under Rear Admiral Farragut.
