Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: ...see note on 1. 481. 300. a nations shallow joy;--the rejoicings in England at the victory of Vimiera, which were followed by the disappointment caused by the Convention. 301. Here Folly, &c.;--the Folly is that of the English, which neutralised their victory, while the Policy of the next line is that of the French. Byron had no exalted idea of the foreign politics of his country; he has elsewhere embodied his views in an epigram: The world is a bundle of hay, Mankind are the asses who pull; Each tugs it a different way, And the greatest of all is John Bull. Yet he admired England as the champion of freedom; see 2. 115, she, whose genrous aid her name endears; 4. 71, The inviolate island of the sage and free. 303. For chiefs like ours, &c.;-- may such blunderers win no honours. 304. Woe to the conquering, &c.;--the exclamation of Brennus after the capture of Rome, Vae victis, is now to be changed to Vae victoribus. 305. droops;--hangs her head. 309. if blush they could;--if they had not lost all modesty. 310. How;--not interrogative; how loudly!how scornfully! 313. By foes, &c.;--cheated by foes, who were defeated by them in battle, but overcame them (in the Convention) at Cintra. 314. points through many a coming year;--points and will point through &c.; but the present tense marks the figure of Scorn as being in an immovable attitude. 319. Though here awhile, &c.;--referring to the criticisms he had just made on the Convention. 321. conscious Reason whisperd;--his better judgment, aware of what was right and of his own shortcomings, suggested to him. 323. But as hi gazed, &c.;--he saw what was his duty, but it failed to make a permanent impression upon him. 324. To horse;--after staying...
