

Elusive

These poems are my first attempt to try and describe through poetry some elusive yet at times very tangible and too real to ignore feelings and other such emotions that can be a part of our lives. Some times this can be attempted by describing/painting something completely unrelated and letting the mind take free reign and make the connection and close the parallel circle itself. A few of those times the attempt might be succesful, -or it might just only open the door enough to make you think it is worth trying just one more time...
