THE STARS
At the hour of midnight, near a stream,
Lift thine eyes and watch the starry sky:
Myriads of miracles take place
In that vastly distant world on high.
The eternal candles of the night
Are unseen amid the glare of day,
Giant pillars of unquenched fire
Move so stately and so far away.
In the quiet hour of midnight calm,
Chasing the deceit of sleep away,
Let thy soul gaze deeply at the words
Of the fishermen from Galilee,
And within the confines of this book
The eternal shall unfold before thee,
The celestial firmament of heaven
In its boundlessness and radiant beauty.- A. S. Khomyakov (1804-1860)

INTRODUCTIONS
Saint Pantaleon was born in Nicomedia of a pagan father and a Christian mother, who died while her son was still a child. He was among the court physicians of the Emperor Galerius Maximianus. Deceived by hearing the false maxims of the world applauded, he was without religion when God decided to rescue his soul from its unhappy darkness

LIFE
Saint Pantaleon of Nicomedia
CONCLUSION
SPIRITUAL POETRY
ORTHODOX
Once, as Panteleimon was on his way to medical school, he found a dead child on the road, who had been bitten by a poisonous snake, and the snake itself lying coiled nearby. At first the saint moved away in fear, but then he thought to himself: Now is the time for me to test the truth of all that the elder Ermolas told me. Then the saint prayed to God, saying: O Lord Jesus Christ, although I am unworthy to call upon Thee, but if

Thou wishest me to become Thy servant, show Thy might, that by the power of Thy name this child would arise and the snake would die. And immediately the child arose, as out of a deep sleep, well and alive, while the snake cracked in half. Then Panteleimon came to believe in Christ absolutely and, giving thanks to God, immediately went to Ermolas to be baptized. From that day St. Panteleimon gave himself and all his knowledge over to the service of mankind: he treated the sick, helped the poor and never took any payment for it. Gradually he tried to urge his father away from idol worship and lead him to Christ. Once, a blind man, who had been to see all the famous physicians in the city, and who had spent all his wealth on them without getting any help, was brought to Panteleimon as a last resort. Panteleimon's father, Eustorgius, advised his son not to accept the case at which even the best physicians had failed, in order to avoid ridicule, but Panteleimon said to his father: Wait a while, father, and you will see the power of my healing. With these words he touched the blind man's eyes with his fingers, saying: In the name of my Lord Jesus Christ, Who is the light of all the blind, open your eyes. Immediately the eyes of the blind man opened and he could see. SOURCES: Holy-transfiguration.org
