

Thai and the Dolphin Cannon

Thai was born with untried skills usually acquired only after years of training. Her talents developed quickly, soon recognized by experienced sailors and athletes. Adventure was Thais calling... In her youth lies a story within itself. At age two, she was swimming without assistance. At age six, she was an active participant on her fathers fish-boat - a two-masted deep water schooner. At age seventeen she was the captain on the schooner, in full charge. Through early years, attending school, she was popular, mostly well-liked; but there were times when defensive actions were necessary -- pugilistic happenings. These incidents, likely brought on because of the strange behavior of Thais left eye and her crooked smile -- defects formed at birth. Even so, those who challenged her aggressively were to limit the encounter to one challenge. Thais pugilistic ability respected. In high-school Thai was awarded honors for highest achievements at swimming events -- competitions. Swimming was her most favored sport and recreation, particularly long-distance swims. At age eighteen, Thai lost her parents - mother and father killed in an airplane crash. Tragic happenings continued: The fishing fleet, of which Thais fathers schooner was involved, were advised to leave the harbor of their anchorage. The Coast Guard was to take possession. The move was beyond Thais financial means. Without employment, Thai decided to leave the small fishing settlement and go to the city - a metropolis she had never visited. By a string of bizarre circumstances that revealed Thais talents, Thai was accepted into active participation in a rogue crime-stop agency. Adventures involving gangsters, drug smugglers, child abductors, problems of illegal immigrants, involve Thai and two trained dolphins in seemingly impossible, dangerous missions.
