

The Spook Light: Book One: The Frank Evans Series

Just south of Joplin, Missouri, a small light glimmers, bouncing through the trees in the dead of night. Doctors and Army Specialists have flocked to this deserted gravel lane; all have searched for an explanation, all have failed to unlock its mystery... Until now. Frank Evans sees a vision of his sister covered in blood on the night she dies. Full of questions, he returns to his hometown of Joplin, reuniting with his two best friends and Liza, the only woman he has ever loved. Together, they will seek the answers lying within the mystery of his sisters death, the unusual painting and gifts she left behind, and the ghosts who appear to aide them on their journey through The Spook Light... You have to save my children, Frankie. For their sake, you have to believe. As she finishes, her body transforms into a light mist. Although Frank can barely make out her face, the heat continues to pulse through him. A brief moment passes by, and then she is gone. Frank sinks to the ground, putting his hands to his face, Not the Spook Light, Katie. Not the Spook Light.
