

Places of Truth: journeys into sacred wilderness

Poet and psychotherapist Jay Ramsay has been drawn to wild places all his writing life, in search of a particular deep listening experience. Here he shares his soundings. Trwyn Meditations, a sequence set in Snowdonia, begins this 23-year odyssey. By the Shores of Loch Awe takes us to the fecund wilds of Scotland. The Oak celebrates an ancient tree in the heart of the Cotswolds. The Sacred Way is an evocation of Pilgrim Britain. Culbone records the hidden history of the smallest parish church in England in a steep North Somerset valley near where Coleridge wrote Kubla Khan. The final sequences, The Mountain and Sinai, takes us beyond, in all senses, touching the places where we find I and Self. A timely and timeless reflection about our place on the planet.
