

Epistles to the Red Planet

There is a barrier between men and women that makes it almost impossible to completely understand each other. This is one woman's relationship trail in letter form to each of the important, non-related men who crossed her path from childhood to almost sixty years of age. Each letter discusses the relationship with that male and then tells him what she learned from him. Some are warm and loving letters with good lessons, and others tell harder stories of more difficult and, in some cases, frightening lessons. Each letter will touch the hearts of men and women alike. The reader will be able to relate to these letters, as many touch common threads in all our lives.
