Neah has been tormented by sad memories of her mother ever since she died. It was six years ago, but a terrifying nightmare still haunts her night after night. For some reason, she has been fortunate to survive the very disease that gripped her mother so many years ago: The Coughing. This devastating disease brings death slowly, agonizingly, and yet, in a short year, it takes over its victim completely. Neahs new job at the local clinic, tending to people who are sick like her mother was, forces her to come face to face with memories that she has been avoiding for a very long time. She tries to delay the emotional battle that awaits her, but when her friends life is in jeopardy, she must accept her fate and overcome the impossible to save everyone she cares about.
