

Poetry of My Life-2: Open Your Eyes and See

Use my mind, my feet, and my hands, because if anybody can do this, Lord, you must believe I can. Because as long as I have you with me, Nothing can be a match. That's why I will cling to you forever, And forever stay attached. Ovella Blackmon has faced heartbreak, numerous tests of faith, an alcohol and drug addiction, and an abusive father. Follow her inspiring life journey in this collection of poetry on love, hope, and, above all, faith in God. Hiding from Daddy's rage behind curtains and, later, an alcohol and drug addiction, Ovella is searching for healing for herself, her siblings, and others. During her lifelong quest for spirituality, she concludes it's only God who can make her stand up straight, because no one else has enough power to deal with her problems, not even herself. The poems in this collection are testaments to both Ovella's irreplaceable resolve to find herself, and her unmovable faith in God.
