

The Dark Falcon, Vol. 4 of 4: A Tale of the Attruck (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Dark Falcon, Vol. 4 of 4: A Tale of the Attruck The camp, or rather the bivouac, of the Kajars had been formed as we have already said; the horses, picketed in long rows, were guarded by their riders, who, collected together in little groups around such fires as their scanty materials could afford, prepared the food which the policy of the Khan had provided for them, and passed the time in the careless mirth, but with all the watchfulness, of old campaigners. Each man had his arms at hand; and each horse, after having been well rubbed down and fitly tended, stood with nose-bag replenished, but with saddle girt on over the numud or felt blanket which protected him from the chill night air. All was ready for mounting at a moments warning. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
