

Abington Abbey: A Novel (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Abington Abbey: A Novel
I believe I've got the very house, Cara. Have you, darling? It's the fifty-third. Ah, but you wait till you see. Abington Abbey. What do you think of that for a name? Just come into the market. There are cloisters, and a chapel. Stew ponds. A yew walk. Three thousand acres, and a good head of game. More can be had by arrangement, and we'll arrange it. Presentation to living. We'll make Bunting a parson, and present him to it. Oh, it's the very thing. I haven't told you half. Come and have a look at it. George Grafton spread out papers and photographs on a table. His daughter, Caroline, roused herself from her book and her easy chair in front of the fire to come and look at them. He put his arm around her slim waist and gave her a kiss, which she returned with a smile. Darling old George, she said, settling his tie more to her liking, I sometimes wish you weren't quite so young. You let yourself in for so many disappointments. George Grafton did look rather younger than his fifty years, in spite of his grey hair. He had a fresh complexion and a pair of dark, amused, alert eyes.
