

Sepia and Silence: Where Emotions Are Timeless

Sepia and Silence takes us on a journey of observation, contemplation and raw emotion in such a way that those who read it will have little trouble in connecting with or understanding the experiences and feelings so evident within. Split into three sections, the poems have been selected from the many written over a five year period. Topics aired include feeding the cat and visiting the bottle bank, you are introduced to the authors shoes, Barbaras new kitchen and will play the anxiety game. Within the final section Heart and Soul and through the poem A Moment In Time the author gently, simply and beautifully takes all who read by the hand, and allows them to enter his constricted world of grieving. A monochrome world, stripped bare, so that all that remains are heartfelt words, spoken from the soul. Simon has worked closely with Al McDonagh, who has been responsible for the photography. Sepia and Silence contains a rich, varied selection of mainly monochrome images to complement and bring a further dimension and expression to the poetry within. In the authors own words These images are an interpretation of the written work, through the eyes of another, they are works in their own right. I love the way, at times, they are at a tangent to that which I have written, encouraging one to look deeper within. Poetry and photography, both in an instant, capture that which we feel, and strive to portray The author has an uncanny ability to capture life, love and longing in a truly honest way. Many poems have a distinct metaphysical quality, some contain spiritual undertones of his earlier works, all belong within the domain of Sepia and Silence for emotions are truly timeless. The poem Fractions of One has recently been chosen by Wilkes University, Pennsylvania, and will appear amongst the winning poems selected for the Poetry in Transit competition - themed on conflict.
