Excerpt from The Masque of Psyche: Or the Seven Ages of the Soul, an Arrangement of Scenes From Seven Shakespearean Plays

The Masque Of Psyche. And drink the light, my feet refuse to tread The downward path and on the heights they rest. Behold, I show seven stages of the soul, Each picture drawn by Shakespeares matchless pen: And as ye gaze, the meaning I unfold In terms of soul-life granted mortal men. I am that Ariadnes thread that guides The Searcher, who would track unto his lair The Monster who devours human hearts - To some he leers as Ennui, some Despair. The soul behold we first in Infancy When clowns amuse and acrobats delight; The artisans who play before the king And show forth This bes death (O woful sight!) - These do I choose as type of primal soul: How elemental they, in face of complex man! Yet such the wonder of the human race That chasms such as this it still can span! (Midsummer Nights Dream: Rehearsal scene. Act 1, Scene 2; Act 3, Scene 1.) (Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute and Snort.)

Quin. Is all our company here? Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip. Quin. Here is the scroll of every mans name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and the duchess, on his wedding-day at night. Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on; then read the names of the actors; and so grow to a point.
