

The Untitled Works of Loves Apprentice

This book is a reflection of love through the eyes of a student. Although still just a novice, I consider myself to be loves apprentice. I have noticed tremendous changes in myself. In my last collection expressed in Pressing, Pulling, Breathing, We Live, I was writing through a lot of pain. It was my cathartic release. Today I am writing from a much more loving place. The Untitled Works of Loves Apprentice was written with much more appreciation for the life that I am privileged to have. It is prudent that we continue to expose ourselves to new ideas. It is important that we continue to challenge our minds and seek the truth. It is also important to be compassionate to the fact that everybodys truth is different. By accepting the values of our ancestors without questioning whether they are beneficial to us as a collective community, we are creating our experiences through the values of others. This, to me, is sin. A word of advice - Never stop dreaming. Dont look to duplicate past successes, but create new ones. Dont be in too much of a rush to get to where you are going. You will get there. Walk. Take the time to enjoy the little things - the quiet times. Pay attention. Learn. Be appreciative for what is. Read. Express yourself creatively. Seek inspiration. In doing these things I have created these works. It is my hope that these words can bless you as much as they have blessed me.
