

Through an Open Window

I write to greet and chat with ghosts, Mary Lavery Carrig tells us; I write because it cuts a path through my darkness...I write to honour love. Poetry, for her, is a medium to a place where magic happens. Magic happens as the particular becomes the universal; magic happens as the ordinary becomes the extraordinary: she can find the father, son and holy ghost in a leaf of cabbage. Through An Open Window is a worthy successor to her first volume of poetry, expanding and developing themes first visited in the earlier collection and breaking into new ground. Like Saint Augustine, who she quotes, her whole business in this life is to restore to health the eye of the heart. Like the widow in her eponymous poem, she brings us to a place where winter is gone. I welcome this volume and wish it all the success it deserves.
